Cooking without thawing is one way to make the most of that garden-fresh flavor and bright color in frozen vegetables. Quick cooking is best for vegetables, so have water boiling. Then take the frozen vegetables right from the freezing compartment and put them in the water. If you're fixing broccoli, you may prefer to thaw it enough so you can break the stalks apart before putting them into the boiling water.

VACCINES SAVE FARM PROFITS

Vaccines now produced from chick embryos.

Vaccines developed by veterinary science during the last few years are saving livestock and poultry owners millions of dollars.

Hog cholera, baby chicks' pips, a big part of the advances that have been made, methods have made it possible to grow disease-producing viruses in the chick's embryos. By this technique, scientists now produce vaccines against such diseases as equine sleeping sickness, fowl pox, Newcastle disease and laryngotracheitis of fowls from the infected embryos.

Through similar methods, veterinarians have developed a vaccine which protects cattle against rinderpest—the deadly "tropical cattle plague."

Another system is being used to make effective vaccines against foot-and-mouth disease of cattle and contagious sore mouth of sheep. This method is based on removing the disease-causing power of a virus, but leaving its ability to immunize. Thus, when the vaccine is injected into an animal, the animal does not come down with the disease, but builds up resistance to it.

Not only have these discoveries proved valuable in veterinary medicine, but also they are being used to develop vaccines that will protect human beings against virus diseases.

The search for new vaccines is by no means ended, for many of the known virus diseases of man and animals have yet to be conquered.

MORRELL - BURNETT

Hebron Baptist Church at Stonewall was the setting for the wedding of Miss Rosa Elizabeth Morrell, of Concord, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dayton Wood Morrell, and Thomas Ray Burnett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rufus Burnett, of Appomattox, Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

The Rev. G. E. Hughes officiated with the double ring ceremony. Music was furnished by Haywood Wooldridge, accompanied by Easley Shuford. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a dress of chantilly lace combined with ivory satin. The bodice was of the lace, fashioned with long sleeves ending in points over the hands and a sweetheart neckline. A full skirt of ivory satin formed a circular train. Her fingertip veil of illusion was held by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a white prayer book topped with white orchids.

Mrs. Henry Gottschall was matron of honor. Aubrey Burnett, brother of the groom, was best man. Ushers were John Morrell, and Joseph Burnett.

After a short trip, they will make their home in Madison Heights.
